Freshman Orientation, Picnic

Activity Night

Students from various organizations gathered shortly after school opened for Activity Night to plan — would you believe — the schedule of events for the coming year? They listened to speakers such as Annette Jarette, and later spent the evening gettin' down.

UPPER LEFT - Marilyn Owrey welcomes the first customers to the grand opening of the snack bar.
UPPER RIGHT - One impatient fellow used Sherry Sethi for an appetizer.
LOWER RIGHT - Pete Albert and his reptilian roommate.

National Railsplitting Festival

Now what could be more relaxing?

Kim Kempert (r.) won the goat-milking contest.

Though not sponsored by the college, the National Railsplitting and Crafts Festival each September annually attracts huge numbers of visitors to campus.

Scheduled events include amateur and professional cow-milking contests, a threshing bee, and junior, amateur and professional railsplitting, just like in Lincoln's day.

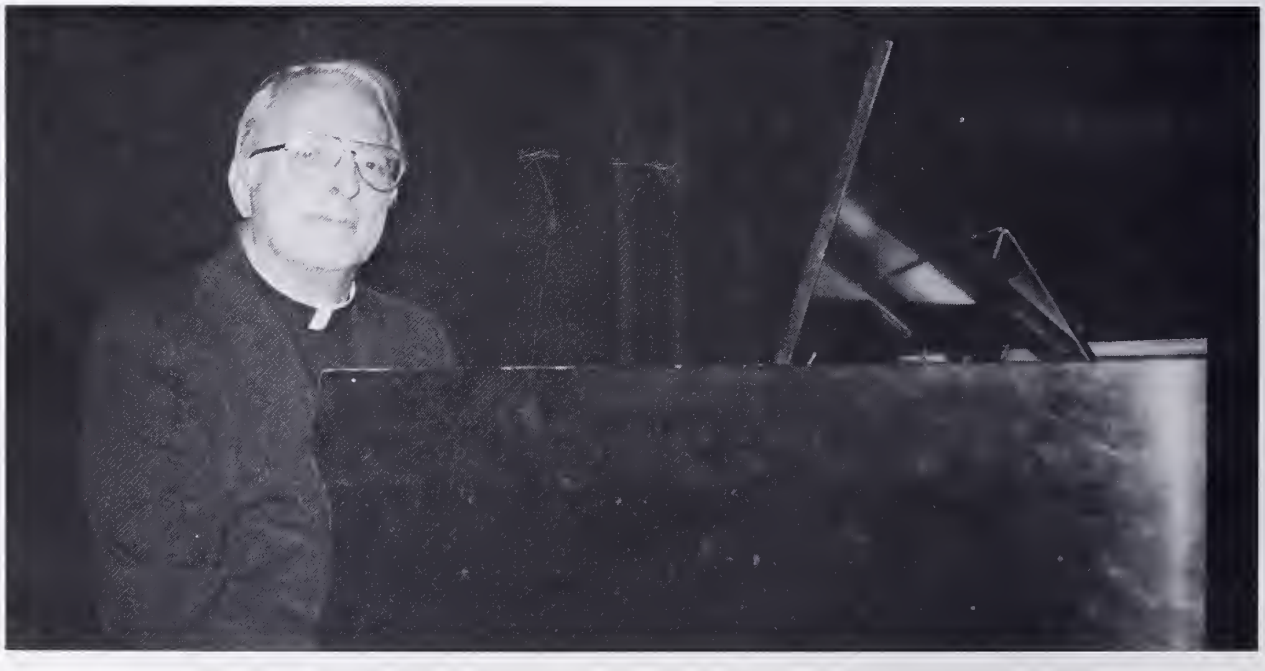
Visitors can buy from numerous concessions such as popcorn, doughnuts, and ham and beans, all cooked in ancient, cast-iron kettles.

For two days each year, its 1865 again.

Visitors

In early May, President Dale Brummet welcomed a group of European travel writers touring Illinois and other Lincoln locales. He shook hands with Frances Krebs of Hamburg, Germany, while Charles Ott (Abe Lincoln) did likewise with Ulla Schickling of Frankfurt.

Father Edward Westerman of Holy Family Church in Lincoln gave a piano recital during one of the Thursday afternoon performing arts labs.



Alondo Copeland, president of the Black Student Association, welcomed Peoria TV newsman Al Orendorff to a soul-food dinner that climaxed Black History Awareness Week in late February.

At the weekly Career Corner, students got a chance to chat with representatives from varied career fields and learn first-hand what those fields involved.

Fall Festival
Bachelor IV Night

Ron Kaell (l.) and John Brownfield, better known as "Featherstar," were a boffo duo at the Fall Festival and numerous other campus social events.

Getting a leg up on the competition at Bachelor IV Night were Sherry Sethi, Julie Panozzo, Lori Volkman, Laurie Mills, Robin Zimmerman, Rocki Hayden and Kim Kempert.

Mark Albert, Kim Kempert, milk machine.

Rex Morford testing Archimedes' principle.

Steve Wolf practicing for his bartender's examination.

Herlena O'Neal just having a good time.

Night

Connie DiLillio (r.) pretending she doesn't know Bette Dirks.

Some of the boys belly up to the bar.

Debbie Lindenberg can't take anymore.

Parents Weekend

During which Mom and Dad visit with their offspring's teachers for a first-hand look at how things are going.

Playboy Night

Don Hilscher, Brayton Danner and friend discuss the wonders of science.

Now who said being a college president isn't any fun?

Wild West Night

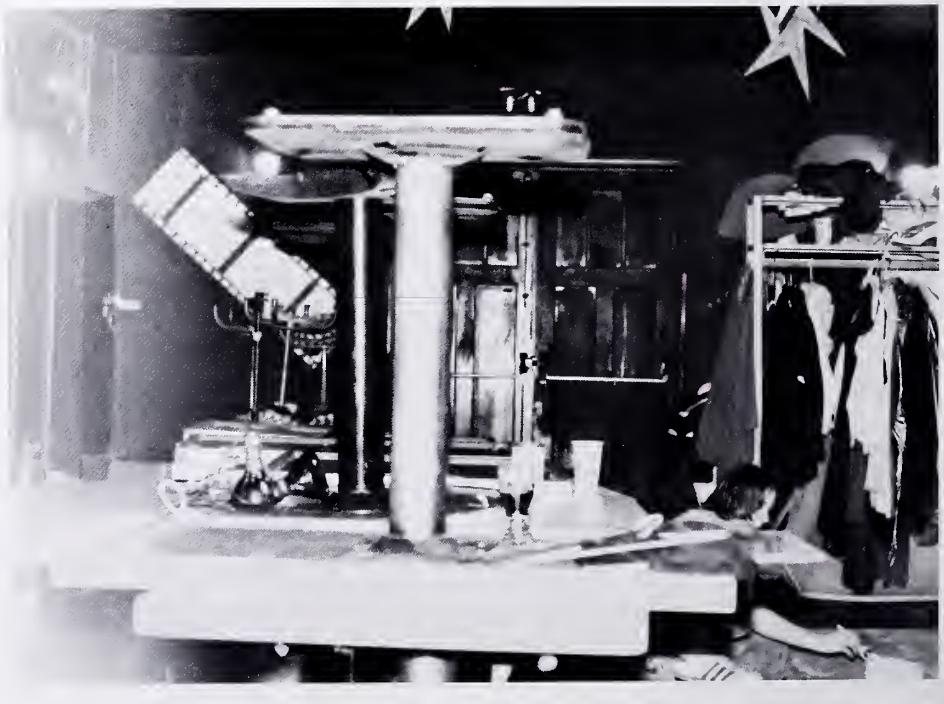
The student center became the Long Branch Saloon last fall, thanks to hard work and good organization by the desperadoes (l.) of Carroll South.

Dave Rudolf and friends (bottom left) provided the music, and Ellen Shawgo (l.), Lila Naffziger (r.) and three of their rough-ridin' cohorts stopped by for a snort or two.

Coffee House

Site of numerous social functions, the Coffee House was revitalized this year, thanks mostly to Dave Sullivan, manager, and Dan Thomas.

It was the scene of "Cabaret Night" and played host to a wide assortment of college activities such as parties, and discussions covering a wide variety of topics.



Freshman Registration

Usually, the Davidson-Sheffer gym is occupied with athletic pursuits, but for two days a year it's where students and faculty get together to map out a course of study for the following semester.

Homecoming

Homecoming 1978 brought many of the "old grads" back to campus for brunches, basketball, swimming, mini-courses, and the traditional homecoming dance.

The mini-courses were weaving, taught by Martha Hargett; Lincolnia, taught by Paul Beaver; and ESP, administered by Brayton Danner.

Mike Berkowitz (r.) joined cagers Tony Reiser and Tim Shoopman at "brunch with the coaches," while Prof. and Mrs. Danner (facing camera) were "captured" at the alumni dinner.

"Say what?"

"Maybe if I tiptoe up on him . . ."

Saturday Night Live

"Hmm . . how DO you spell 'relief'?"

"Snork"

The Audio-Visual Team

One of the more visible group of people throughout the school year was the audio-visual team, led by Susan Thomas and Mary Taylor.

They taped basketball games for showing on the local cable channel, and also took to the outdoors to record the doings of the baseball and soccer teams.

The AV team also coordinated the use of slide projectors, TV monitors and numerous other audio-visual aids by faculty and staff.

Where would the college be without them?

Waiting for the director's call.

Neil Newlon: The Greening Of An Actor

"Hiding" behind the whiskers and costume of a mid-19th century American is none other than Neil Newlon, associate professor of theater.

He donned the duds for a brief appearance in the TV mini-series, "The Chisholms," which aired in March on CBS. Newlon portrayed the judge of a greased pig contest at a Fourth of July picnic.

It was not the first television role for the professor, migrant labor camp manager, playwright, Greenwich Village bartender, and frustrated auto restorer.

A year earlier, Newlon had a small stint in "The Awakening Land," which like "The Chisholms," was filmed at New Salem State Park about 35 miles southwest of the campus.

Reacting with leading man Bob Preston ...
... and posing with his transportation.

Coffee Hour

If most of the campus seemed relatively deserted this year at 10 a.m. each Thursday, it was because many people were dropping by the student center for the weekly coffee hour.

On this particular day, Renata Harrell dispensed the coffee, Delire Gunn pored over her class notes, Kim Kempert relaxed with friends, and Linda Buchanan, Mary Hunter and Val Jordan shared a juicy conversational tidbit.

Out Of Sight, But Hardly Out Of It

All the world may be a stage, as the Bard of Avon said, but before anything happens there, a lot goes on backstage.

Makeup has to be applied, for instance, which Sherry Sethi does for one of her fellow students.

Meanwhile, Rosanne Kilinski goes over some of her notes about stage design and set construction.

This year, it was certainly true that the play's the thing, and it was usually as you like it.

Performing Arts Lab

Although the performing arts students staged four plays this school year, those were by no means the only times they did their thing.

On Thursday afternoons, performing arts labs were held so they could "keep in shape." Roger Lipera applies makeup to Pete Albert and Sara Harris for one of the labs and - Voila! - the finished product.

A member of the Pamela Bedford Dance Troupe kicks up her heels during one of the performing arts labs, many of which featured a variety of guest artists.

The quartet of Dwayne Banks, Kristine Falck-Pederson, Debra Rhodes and Sande Schimel emotes for a performing arts lab audience.

Honors

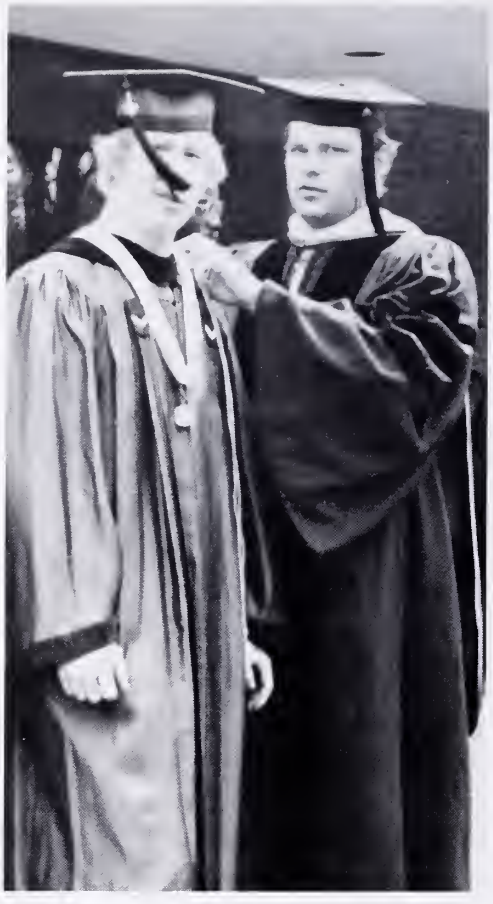
Valedictorian Donald Lumm (above) accepts the Samuel B. Evans Prize as the graduate deemed to represent most nearly the Lincoln College ideals of scholarship, leadership and character.

James Parsons captured the William B. McKinley Prize, the freshman equivalent of the Evans Prize awarded to Lumm.

Assembly

Thomas Stahly (above) won the Marvin D. Johnson Award as the freshman deemed to have contributed the most to the welfare of his fellow students through his involvement in the total Lincoln College community.

Ken Slifka is presented the Madrigale Maconaghie McKeever Award, given to the graduating sophomore deemed to have derived the greatest benefit from attending Lincoln College.



Commencement

The college's 114th academic year all came together May 12 when students, parents, relatives, friends and the entire college family gathered for commencement.

Dr. Sam Redding affixed the valedictorian's medal to Donald Lumm's robe, Sherry Sethi adjusted her hair on the way to the Davidson-Sheffer Auditorium, and President Brummet handed out diplomas.

Afterwards (next page), Herlena O'Neal seemed sort of relieved about the entire procedings, Diane Craver and her dad were all smiles, and Steve Wolf proudly pointed to what the two years were really all about.

This Was The Team Of The Year

Women's basketball took a walk in the sun this year from the dark ages of the past 60 to 70 years.

Under Coach Cyndi Slayton, the Lady Lynx racked up a 23-0 regular season slate and won their opening game in the Section IV championships before falling to Belleville Area College in the title game, 71-64.

Leading the way this season were Ava Walker and Wanda Williams, two high school All-Americans from Thornton, Ill.

Walker was the state's leading women's junior college scorer, racking up just over 24 points per game.

Williams was the team's top rebounder with 310, and averaged a tad more than 22 points per game. The Lady Lynx were "a team for all seasons."

Julie Sullivan, Jeryl Kemp and Lila Naffziger show ball-handling talents.
